JUSTICE JOHN ON THE CITY JAIL

THE DISPENSER RACKS HIS BRAIN

Pays the Day's Expenses With Back Scores-William Saunders Goes to Grand Jury for Attempting to Kill Officer Tate.

Justice John was still indisposed yesterday and paid as little attention to customers as a clerk in a five and ten cents

After court The Great Law Giver held a long conference with Commonwealth's Attorney Richardson in regard to the size and arrangements of a new city jail. The largest number of prisoners ever in jail at one time was 245, and they decided that accommodations for 300 would not be too much in view of the future growth of the city.

Justice John thinks a free lunch counter would prove a great attraction, but ter would prove a great attraction, but be will not insist on this.

A GREAT MEMORY.

Back scores went far towards paying the day's expenses in the Police Court this morning, and the Great Dispenser racked his brain to recall the past of-fenses of the sinners before him until the gray matter was loosened from the ce-phalic ganglion like two freight cars with old-fashioned link couplings, and every nut had to be tightened again before he could think in his usual automatic coup-ling and all vestibuled style.

The Goff family alone worked the Great Lawgiver's thinker several minutes overtime and gave him a spell of mental weariness.

Ballard Goff was charged with being urunk on the street. The Great Dispen-ser viewed him over his pure gold eyeglasses with a meditative air like a man when his wife asks him if he can remem-ber the date of their wedding-day, and then, in an insinuative way, remarked to Mr. Goff: "You have been here be-fore." Then another second's thought-rand more than once."

Sure enough the record showed that Mr. Goff on November 29, 1839, was charged with the same offense and "cut the lecture," and again on July 24, 1990, celebrated the national holiday twenty days late, and "didn't come to meetin'."

A LUMP SUM.

All these sins came to a nice little lump sum, and Mr. Goff concluded he "would have to ride," and in default went to the pen.
